Surgical results in patients with gastric cancer have improved over the past decade because of progress in diagnostic imaging techniques, surgical techniques, and perioperative care. Although the incidence of gastric cancer has declined in developed countries, the overall incidence of gastric cancer is rising in the developing world. The incidence of gastric cancer, however, is much higher in East Asia than in North America, Western Europe, or Oceania. Recent investigations have demonstrated a relationship between ethnicity and the biology and prognosis of gastric cancer.

Studies on the association of ethnicity with the disease biology, treatment efficacy, and survival of gastric cancer are reviewed. Jim Lowder reviewed Legends of Westmarch for Arcane magazine, rating it a 7 out of 10 overall.
