Fulton Street Fair The Fulton Street Fair was a Mid-Summer's Eve celebration held in the Times Square of New York City, New York, United States, from 1885 to 1888. The fair was held annually in July or August, and usually lasted several days. Events included a grand parade, carnival rides, booths, and circus acts. The fair often coincided with the Automobile Show, and sometimes came in place of the latter. The Fulton Street Fair was intended as a promotional venture; its last of four fairs was the most extravagant. It featured ice-cream, live dancers, and wax models of figures in "the scenic arts" and "historical characters." The fair officially opened on June 30, 1885; it was held on Fulton Street, on the western edge of Broadway. The New York Herald reported that 60,000 people attended the first fair. Although a number of competing car shows opened in New York in 1885, the Fulton Fair was by far the most successful. The fair was on Fulton Street from 1885 to 1888. Between 1887 and 1888, the fair was held on a site farther west, at Broadway and 47th Street. It was poorly organized, and poorly attended; it lasted only two weeks in 1888. The fair was moved again, to the Grand Parade in the Pacific Ocean Exhibition building. This was a massive free exhibition of the latest in industrial machinery, featuring the latest steam, electric, and internal combustion engines. The fair extended over a week in the summer of 1888, and drew up to 250,000 visitors a day. The fair also featured, for the first time, large-scale electrical demonstrations.
