We describe an 87-year-old male patient with a 3 months history of enlarging painless firm nodular gynecomastia. Total serum testosterone was below the normal range, but the residual LH was elevated (5.8 mIU/ml). Anti-androgen antibodies were demonstrated by Western blot analysis, indicating the presence of a type II anti-androgen receptor antibody. In order to treat this autoimmune disorder, we administered a low dose of D-penicillamine (100 mg/day). After 40 days of treatment, the patient's general condition improved, the morphological and hormonal alterations normalized, and D-penicillamine was well tolerated. Consequent D-penicillamine therapy could be effective in the management of autoimmune disorders characterized by anti-androgen binding to the estrogen receptors.Q: How to use this code to Generate two random numbers Possible Duplicate: Random number in c++ Hello every one I want to use this code #include #include #include e79caf774b
