The number of undocumented migrants in the United States rose more than 30 percent last year and the total population is expected to be larger than the state of California by the end of 2013, the Pew Research Center announced Monday. The number of undocumented migrants grew to 11.2 million people, while California's total population, as of the most recent Census figures, was estimated at 38.9 million in 2008, according to the report. Pew also said that the number of undocumented immigrants in the United States is higher than at any time since 2001, with recent estimates showing at least 11.2 million, a 30 percent increase from 7.5 million in 2007. "In addition, there are now 1.6 million immigrants from Mexico and Central America who are in the U.S. without authorization and unauthorized immigrants from other countries increased by 65 percent in the past 10 years," the report said. The study also estimated that the total number of undocumented immigrants in the United States may be as high as 16 million in 2011, which is more than the population of Canada. According to the report, 14 percent of the 11.2 million migrants in the United States lived in California in 2008. While most people in the country are fully documented, about 6.6 million undocumented migrants made their way to the United States, the report said. Pew said the undocumented population has increased significantly as a result of enforcement actions, such as the arrest and deportation of unauthorized immigrants. Pew also found that the fastest-growing group of undocumented migrants in the country are Asian immigrants. Asian Americans make up 7 percent of the total undocumented population, while black immigrants account for a small percentage of the total undocumented population, the Pew report said. The numbers for the undocumented population in the United States are higher than in previous years, according to the report. Pew researchers said undocumented immigrants are most likely to be found in rural areas and in the West. The Southeast
